WHY HAS THE COLLEGE ELIMINATED LATE REGISTRATION?
Imagine missing the entire first week of your new job. Trying to learn new tasks and catch up can seem impossible, your supervisor may not have time to help, and you are more likely to quit out of frustration. That’s what college is like for many students who register late.

With that in mind, in an effort to boost student success, Bucks County Community College has implemented an earlier registration deadline. Students must register by Thursday, January 23 for a wide selection of classes that run from January 22 to May 13.

“Studies have shown that students who register on time are more likely to succeed in college,” explained Barbara Yetman, the college’s vice president of student affairs. “The first week of class is vital to keeping students on target for the course, and ultimately for the semester. We’d like to emphasize that on-time is the only way to register for the fall semester. The college no longer accepts late registration for any course.”

That means no registration will be accepted during the first week of the 15-week Spring term (January 24 to 28). However, students already registered for Spring courses may adjust their schedules.

WHEN CAN I REGISTER?
Registration re-opens for later-starting courses on January 29. More than 70 face-to-face course-sections are scheduled to begin the week of February 10 to accommodate those who miss the January 23 registration deadline. In addition, dozens of accelerated courses are slated to begin the week of March 3.
